

A young love has consequences that last a lifetime! Rick Newman and Julie Phillips fall in love in 1979 while attending NYU. They plan to be married after graduation, but when Julie becomes pregnant, the baby—their son—is given up for adoption, and the turbulent emotions surrounding the loss ultimately ends their relationship. Family is family—even if you’ve never met. Years later, Rick receives some shocking news and is driven to find the now twenty-seven year old. Following clues from a social worker, he learns his son, Eric, lives in India—and he has a young son of his own. A journey halfway around the world leads to joy and tragedy. On a flight to India, Rick meets a beautiful American, Elena Weisz, and the two form an immediate bond. Upon arrival in Delhi, however, she mysteriously vanishes. Rick immerses himself in the magical, exotic culture of India as he pursues a relentless search for Eric. Paths finally cross, with disastrous results! Rick and Elena meet again on a desert adventure, and he finds himself entangled in a terrorist plot with unimaginable repercussions. His search for Eric also fails to turn out as he’d wished, leaving him devastated. Rick has only one hope remaining, and that is meeting his grandson—Max. Can finding the boy not only heal the past, but provide hope for a brighter future?
